A VISIT TO THE DRAKE MUSEUM

Allen Koenigsberg

On a "cold, gray dawn" (as Vernon Dalhart would have said), on January 18, 1976, APM went to visit what is probably the largest and finest phonograph collection in the world. Accompanied by Howard Hazelcorn, we left Newark Airport at 8:40 a.m. and arrived at good introductory history of radio and shows the many sets that are now so avidly collected. Could Edison have ever realized the potential of his 1883 discovery of the radio tube principle? Both books are enhanced by many original ads (Nipper in a convertible, with a pretty girl!), dates of model debuts, original prices, profiles of inventors and their great discoveries, and numerous hints on collecting early radios as well as TV's. Both books are fine for browsing or research, are well organized and indexed (but where is my Empire cathedral set?), and are exceptionally well-printed and bound. Readers may write to Vintage for a complete list of other publications, or order these at the following prices: Vintage Radio ($5.95 softbound, $7.95 hard), and Flick of the Switch ($6.95 softbound, $9.95 hard). Write to Vintage Radio, Box 2045K, Palos Verdes, Calif. 90274. Remember how we said "I think I'll buy just one to have around the house"? Now if we could only get the old broadcasts! □

DEAR APM:

Question: You once said in an old Answer Column that Columbia introduced their Toy Graphophone in 1899. But when did they produce their first serious spring-wound disc machine?
P.S., N.Y.

Answer: The change-over from the cylinder to the disc was an event that took many years. Edison had built, and rejected, a tinfoil disc machine in 1878, which has never been found. Ray Wile has uncovered evidence that Thomas McDonald actually built a spring-wound disc machine for Columbia on or about February 3, 1894, but it disappeared after being shipped to Washington, D.C. Columbia's first foray into the disc field interestingly enough was a machine that played 10" discs. This first commercial machine, probably inspired by Zonophone's and Victor's success, and by a new Edison dominance of the cylinder field, was a front-mount Type AH, shipped from Bridgeport, Conn. on October 5, 1901, and delivered to the Douglas Phonograph Company on October 8. The crank hole on the earliest model is about 2" off-center, unlike the slightly later versions. The reproducer was held in the hollow aluminum "tone-arm" by a locking hand screw. The oak cabinet was very ornate, and was eventually replaced by a plainer model. Some catalog illustrations show a threaded spindle "Turn down", but none has been seen on this model. The mainspring barrels on this first model were mounted horizontally, unlike the later models. The AH was quickly followed by the 7" turntable AJ with a top-wind crank.

Indianapolis about an hour and a half later. We were met by Dr. and Mrs. Ellery Drake, and their son David, and after some introductions on all sides, we were whisked away to the Midwest Phonograph Museum in Martinsville, Indiana, some 30 miles south and what an adventure!

The next 8½ hours were spent in a guided tour of a most remarkable Museum, encompassing a collection of over 600 machines and many thousands of disc and cylinder records. Dr. Drake had been collecting since 1963, when phonographs were more plentiful and has continued to add to the collection ever since. His wife, Kate, shares his enthusiasm, and is quite knowledgeable, obviously a model for all phonograph collectors wives!

The building is arranged in two parts, one for the public display area, and the other for storage, and has been open since May, 1974. Recently, the Museum was selected as a stop on a guided bus tour of the area and attendance is expected to be higher this year than ever before. After Coffee at the Drakes' nearby home, we entered a phonograph collector's dream, from the earliest phonograph and tinfoil models to a combination player-piano-phonograph. The day ended all too quickly, but luckily we photographed many of the machines, to be included in the Phonograph Collectors Handbook, and to be shared with our readers.

We would very much like to thank the Drakes for extending us such kind hospitality. Their future plans to make the Museum a center for serious research as well as a public exhibition seem well under way. Their welcome is obvious to all, as you can see on our front cover.

The pages following show some of the unusual phonographs which can be seen in person. Collectors are advised to make their appointments ahead of time, by phone or mail. Turn the page and enjoy our trip with us!

The Melville-Clark Apollo Player Piano concealed a turntable with synchronized disc records.

An unknown cylinder machine, ca. 1890's, has mainspring tension indicator, but who made it?

Lights! Music! The rare Capitol Lamp Phonograph was made during the 1920's.

The Regina Hexaphones played six cylinders selectively, made after 1905. 2-min. on right.

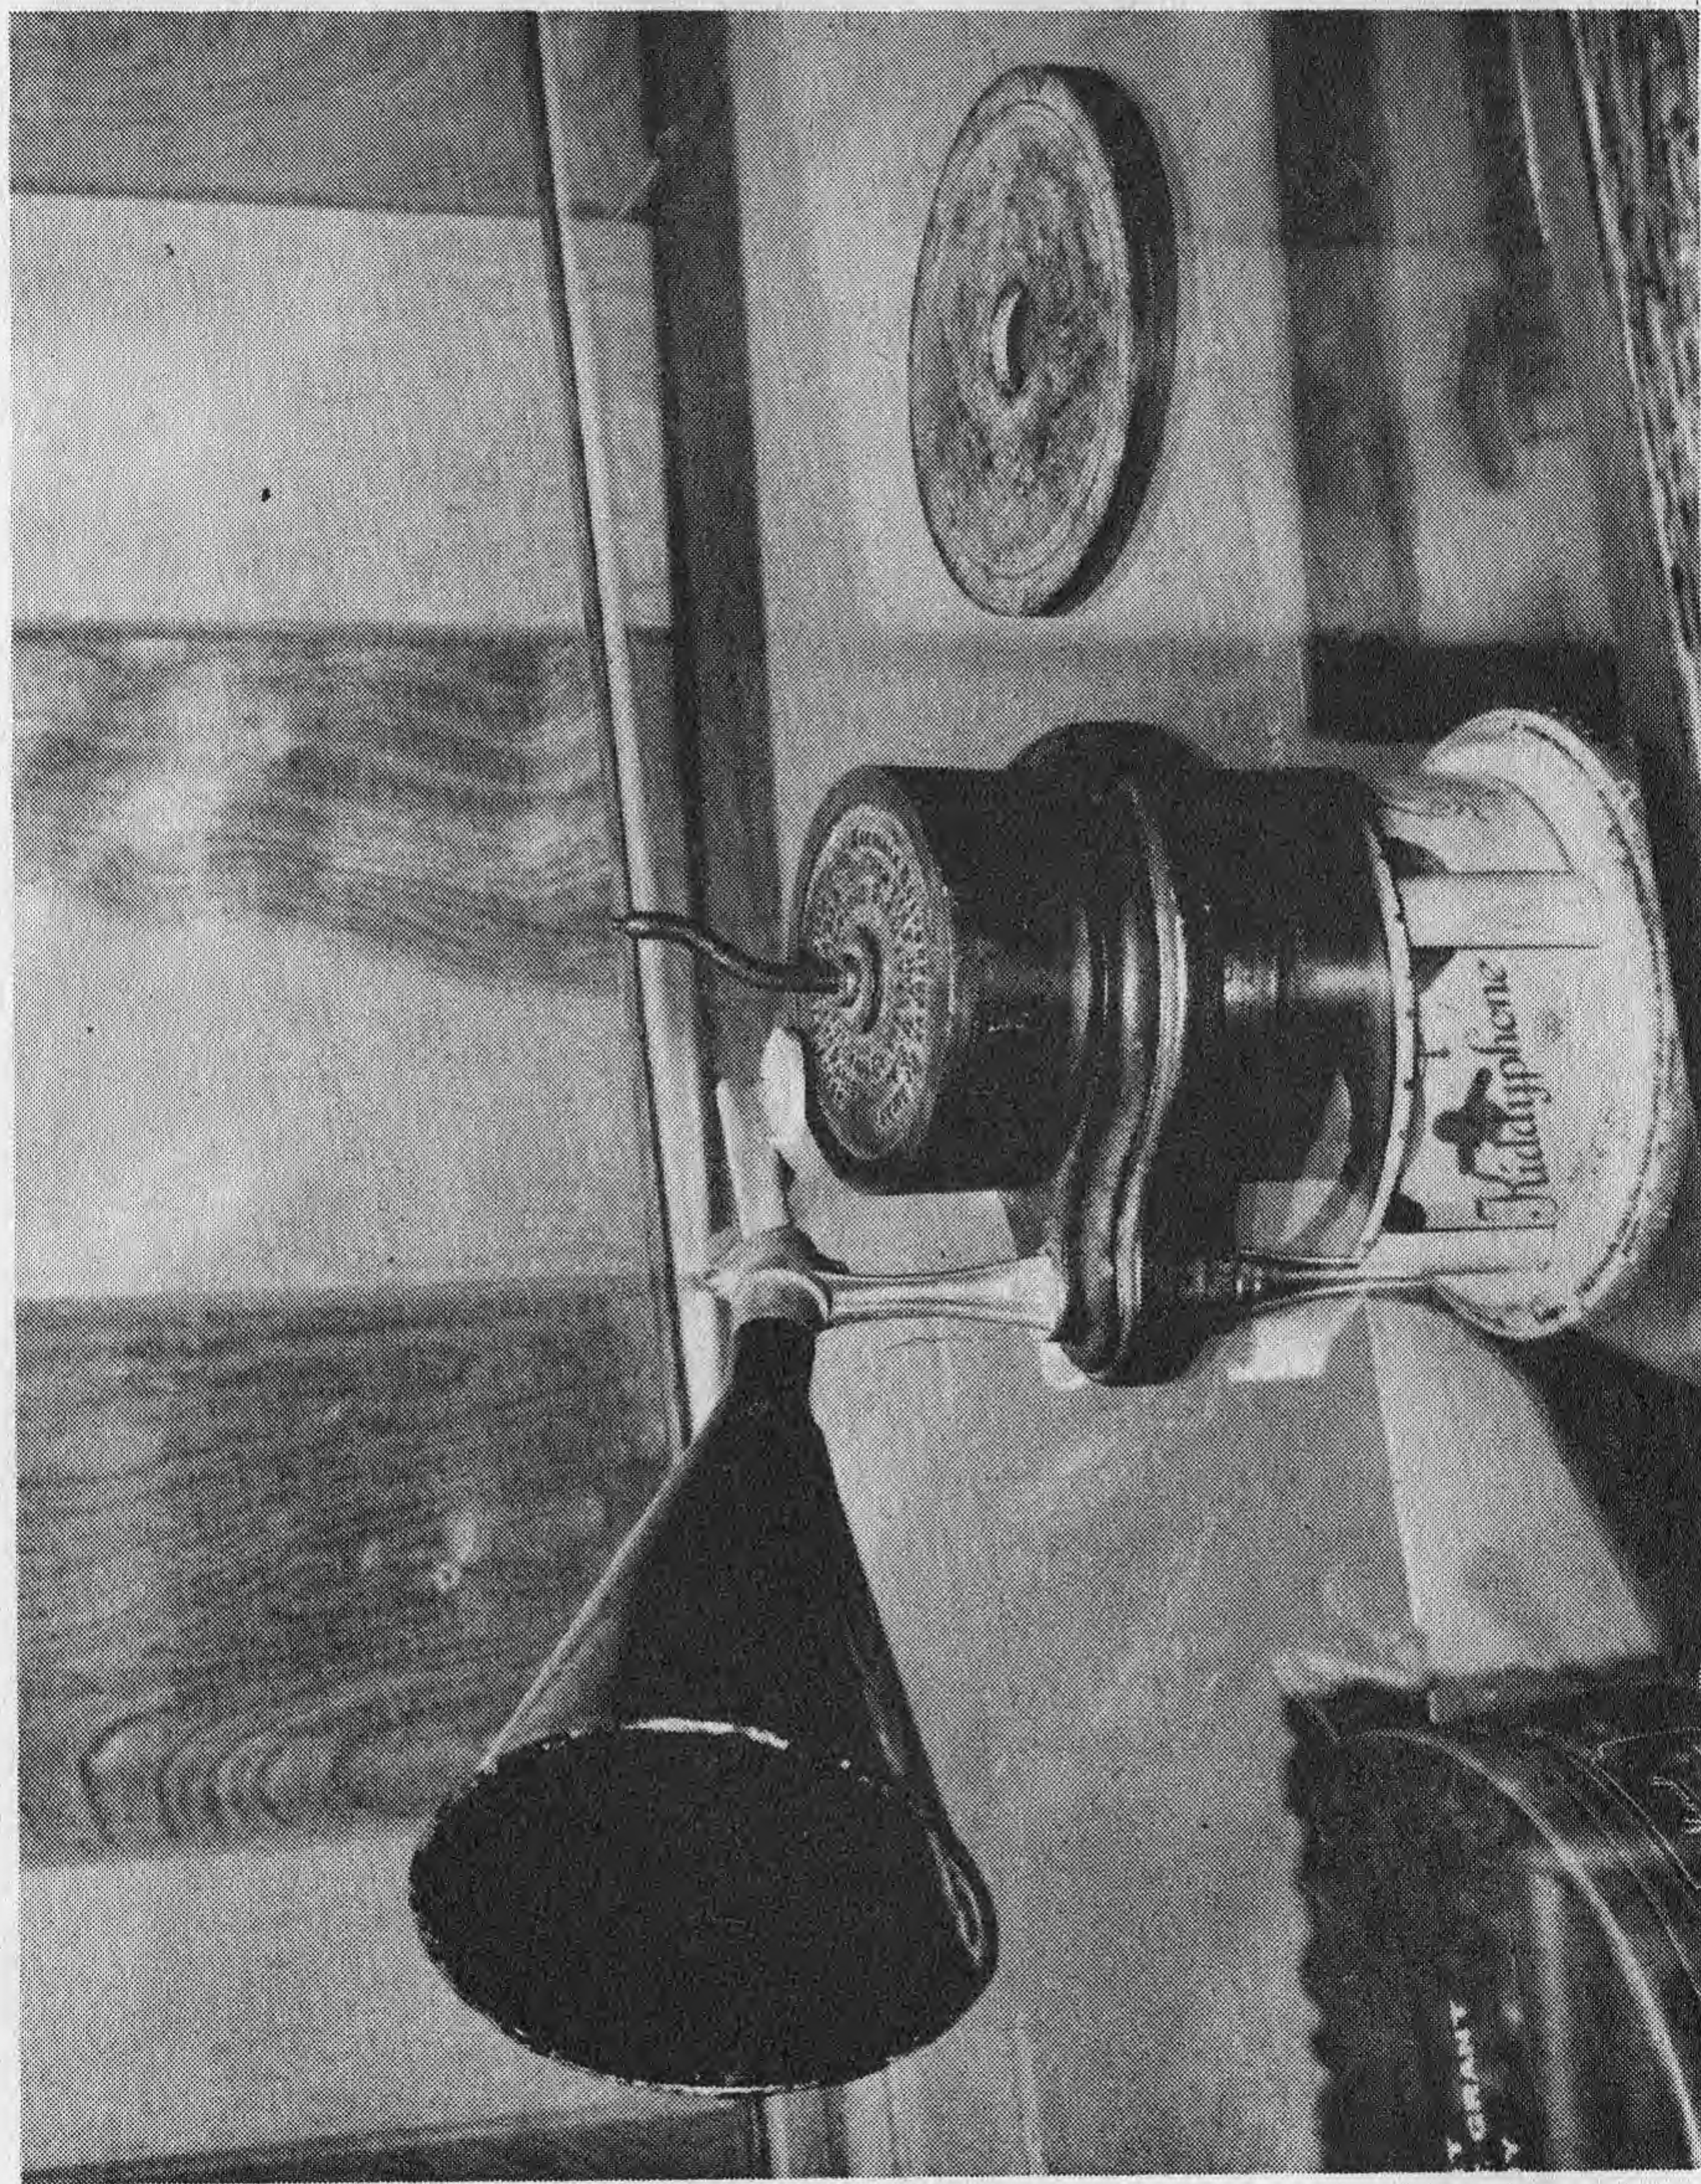

The only known example of a complete Victor Auxetophone. Compressed air motor in bottom.

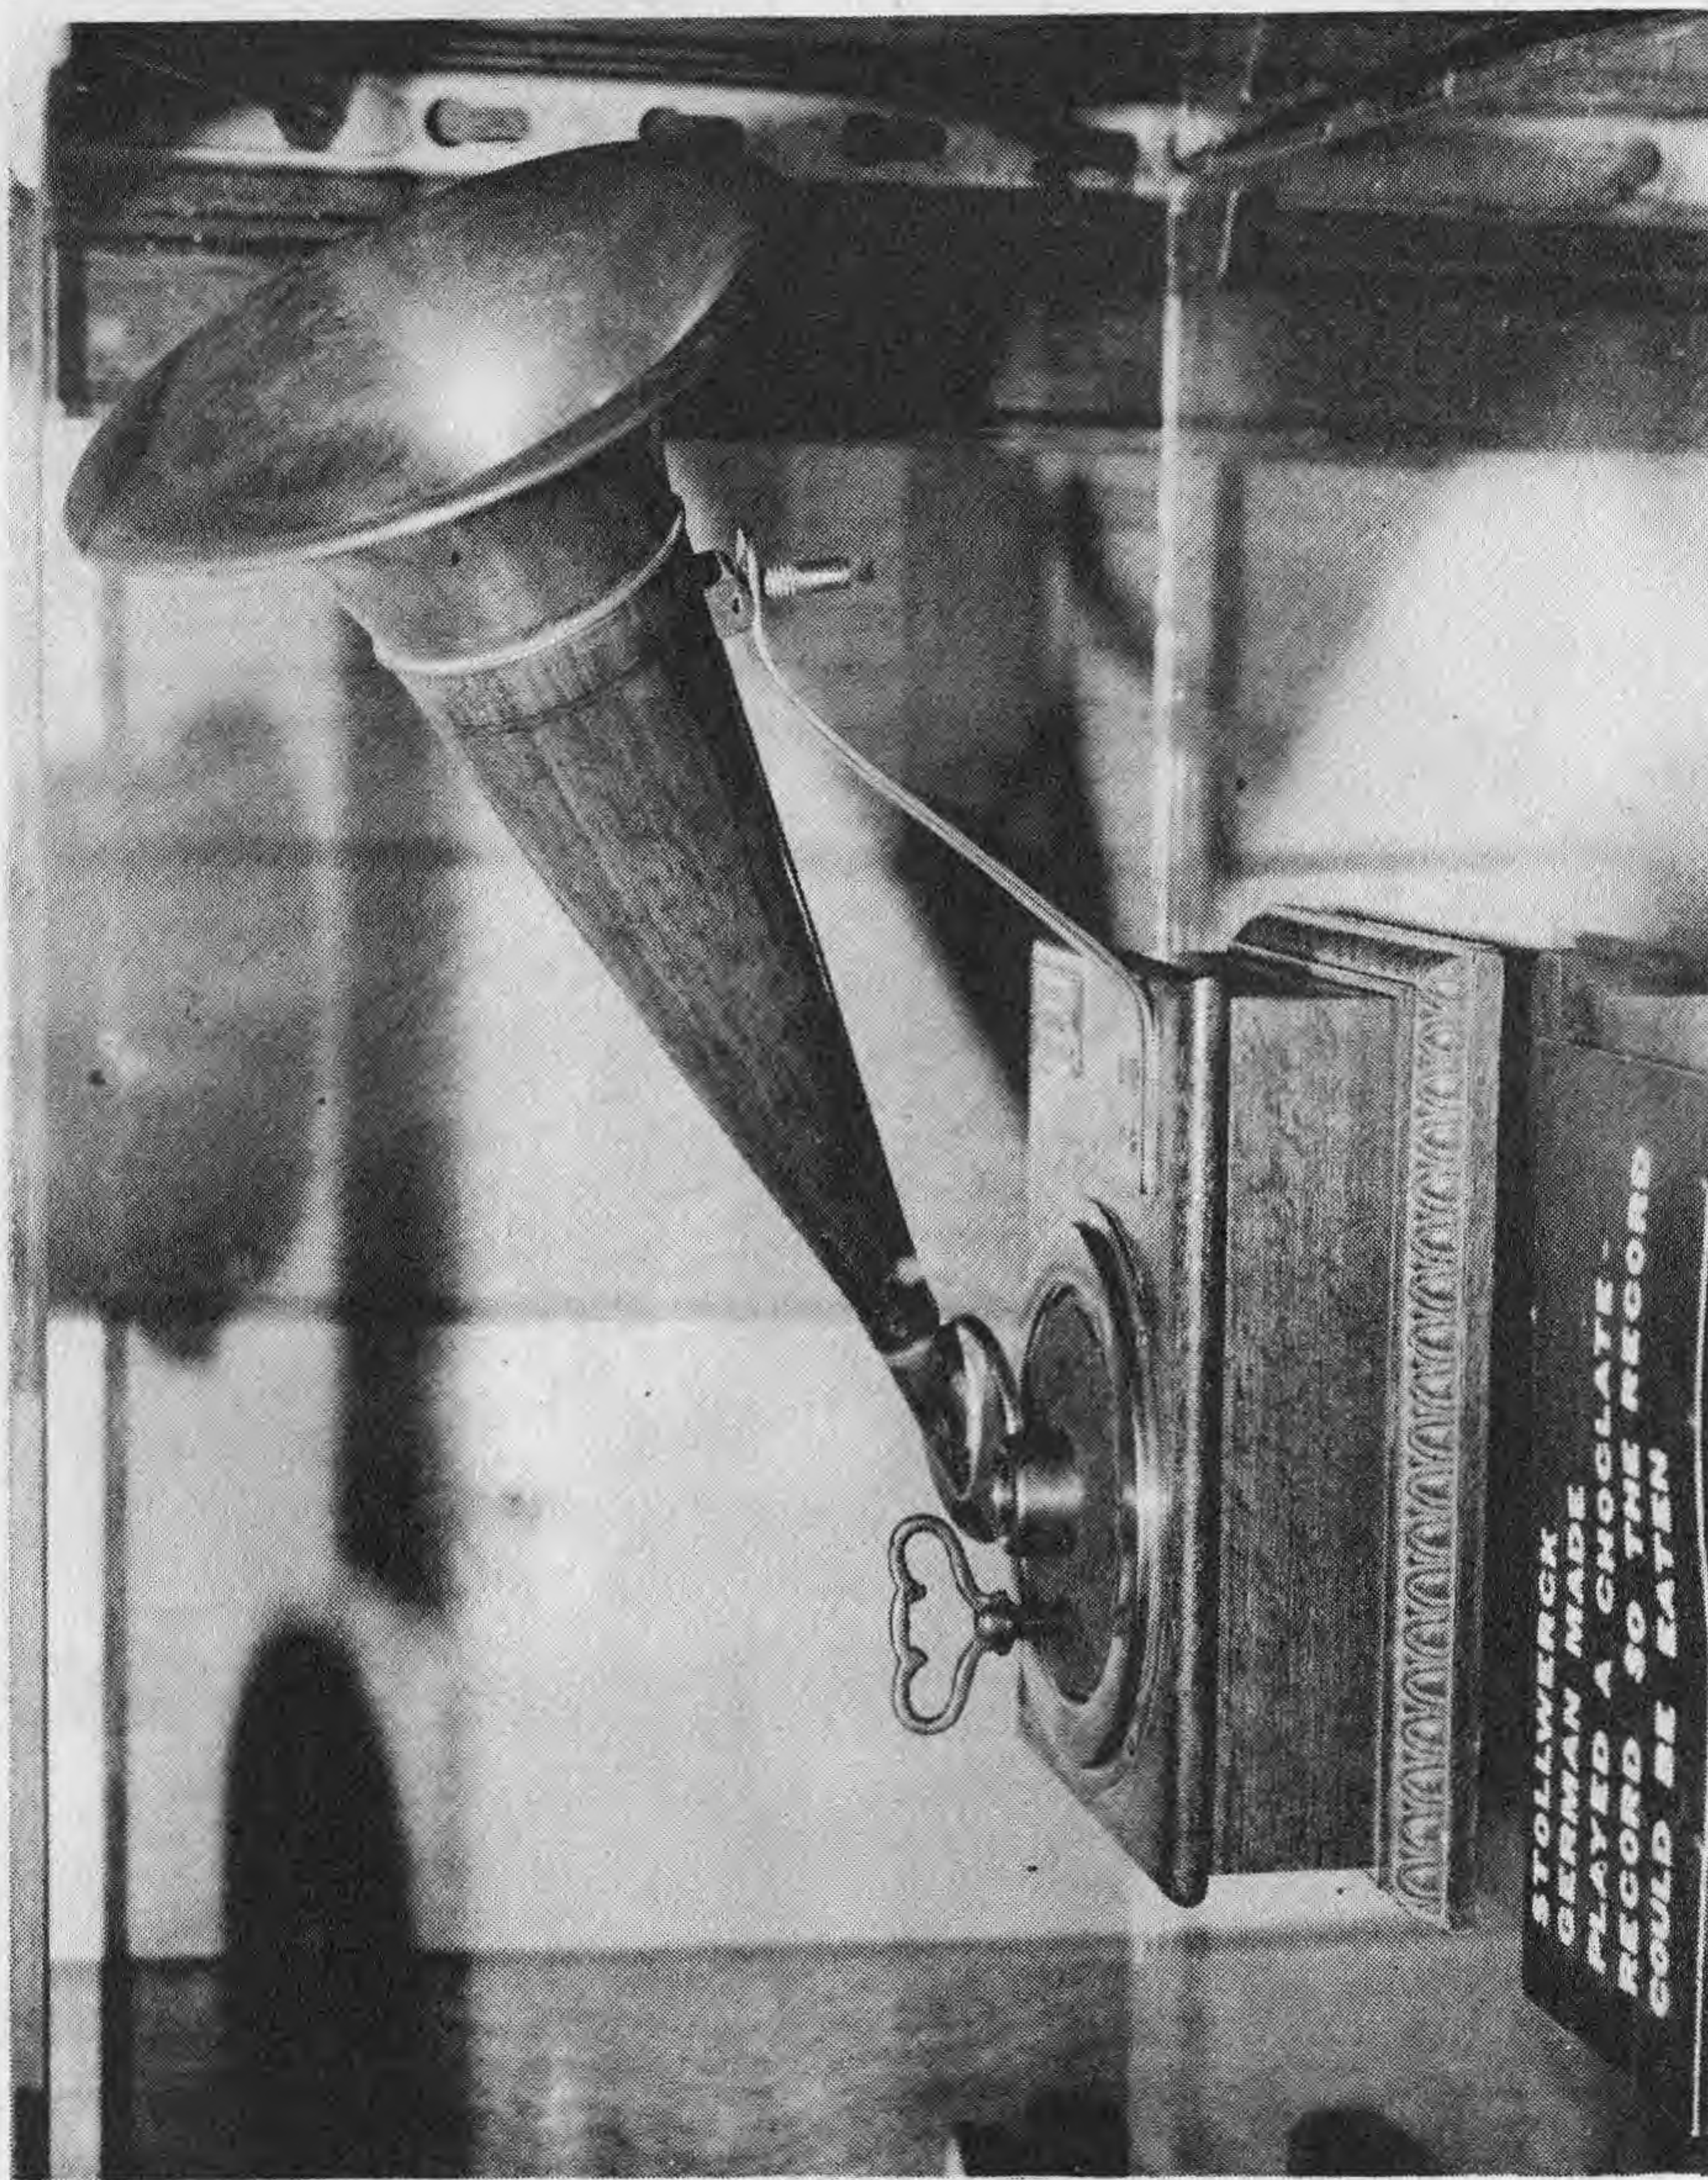

A triumph of phonograph design, made by or for the Douglas Phonograph Co., ca. 1906.

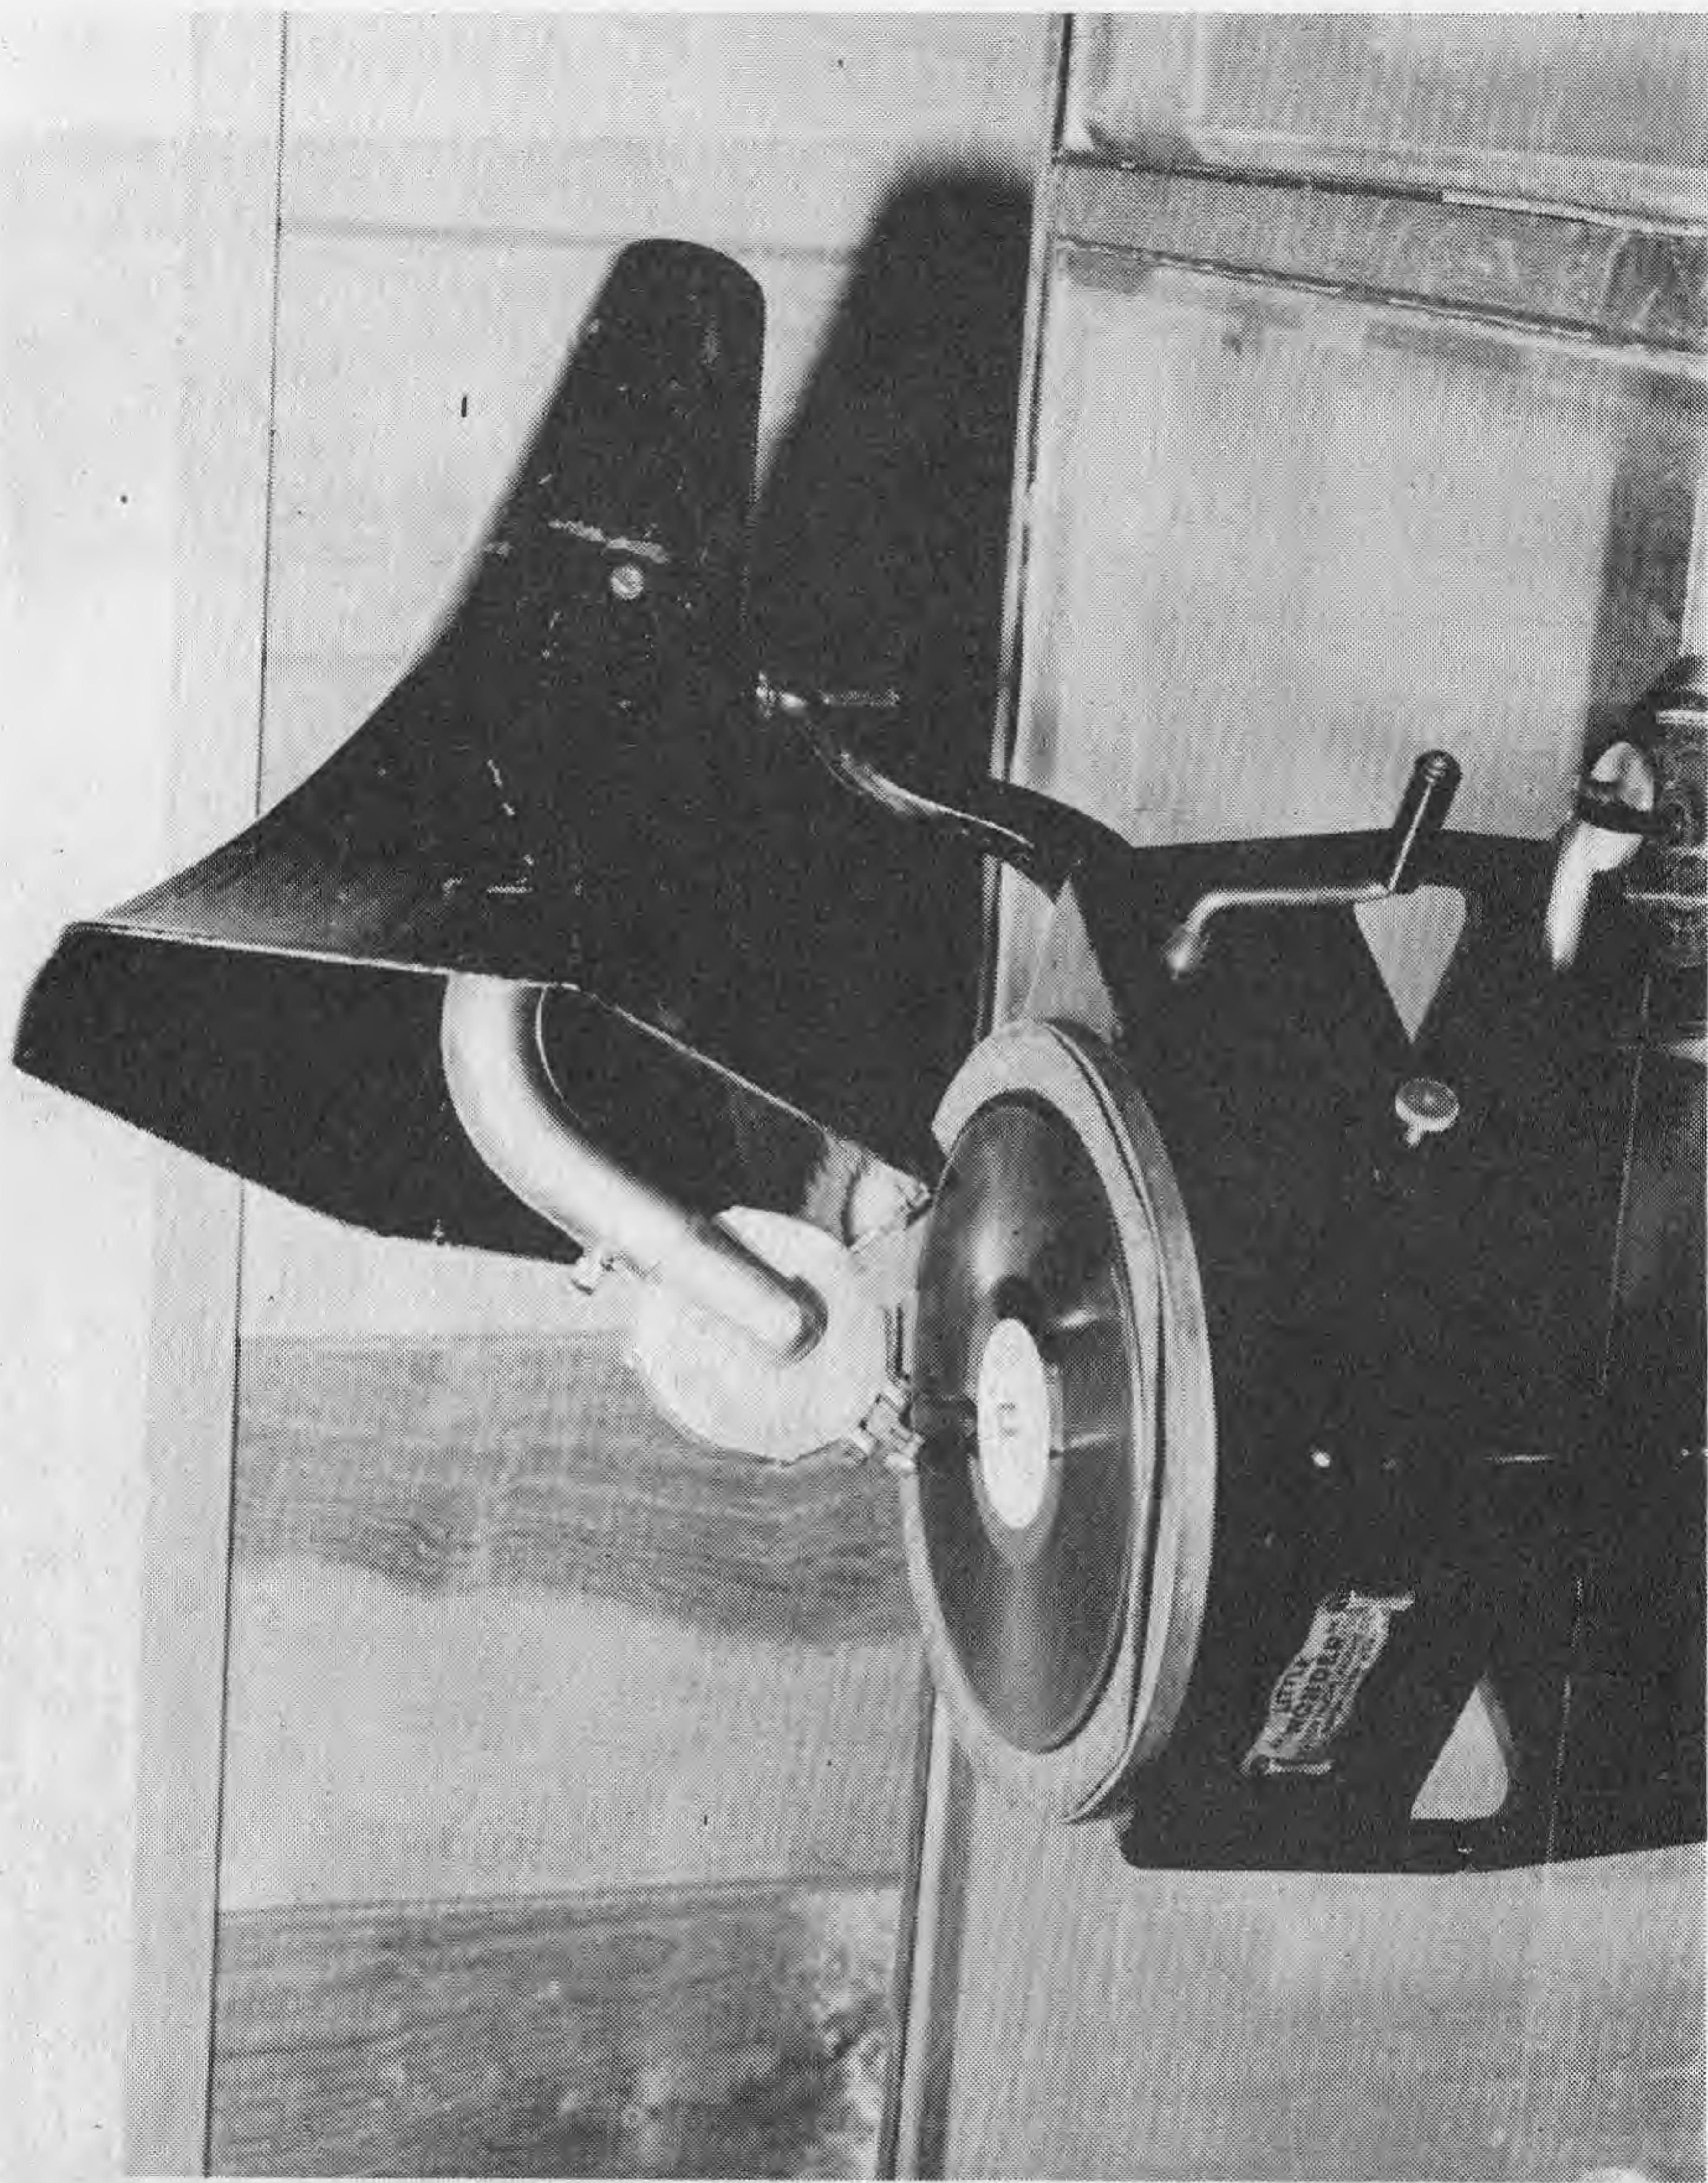

The French Lioret Talking Doll, made after 1896, used celluloid cylinders and a spring motor.

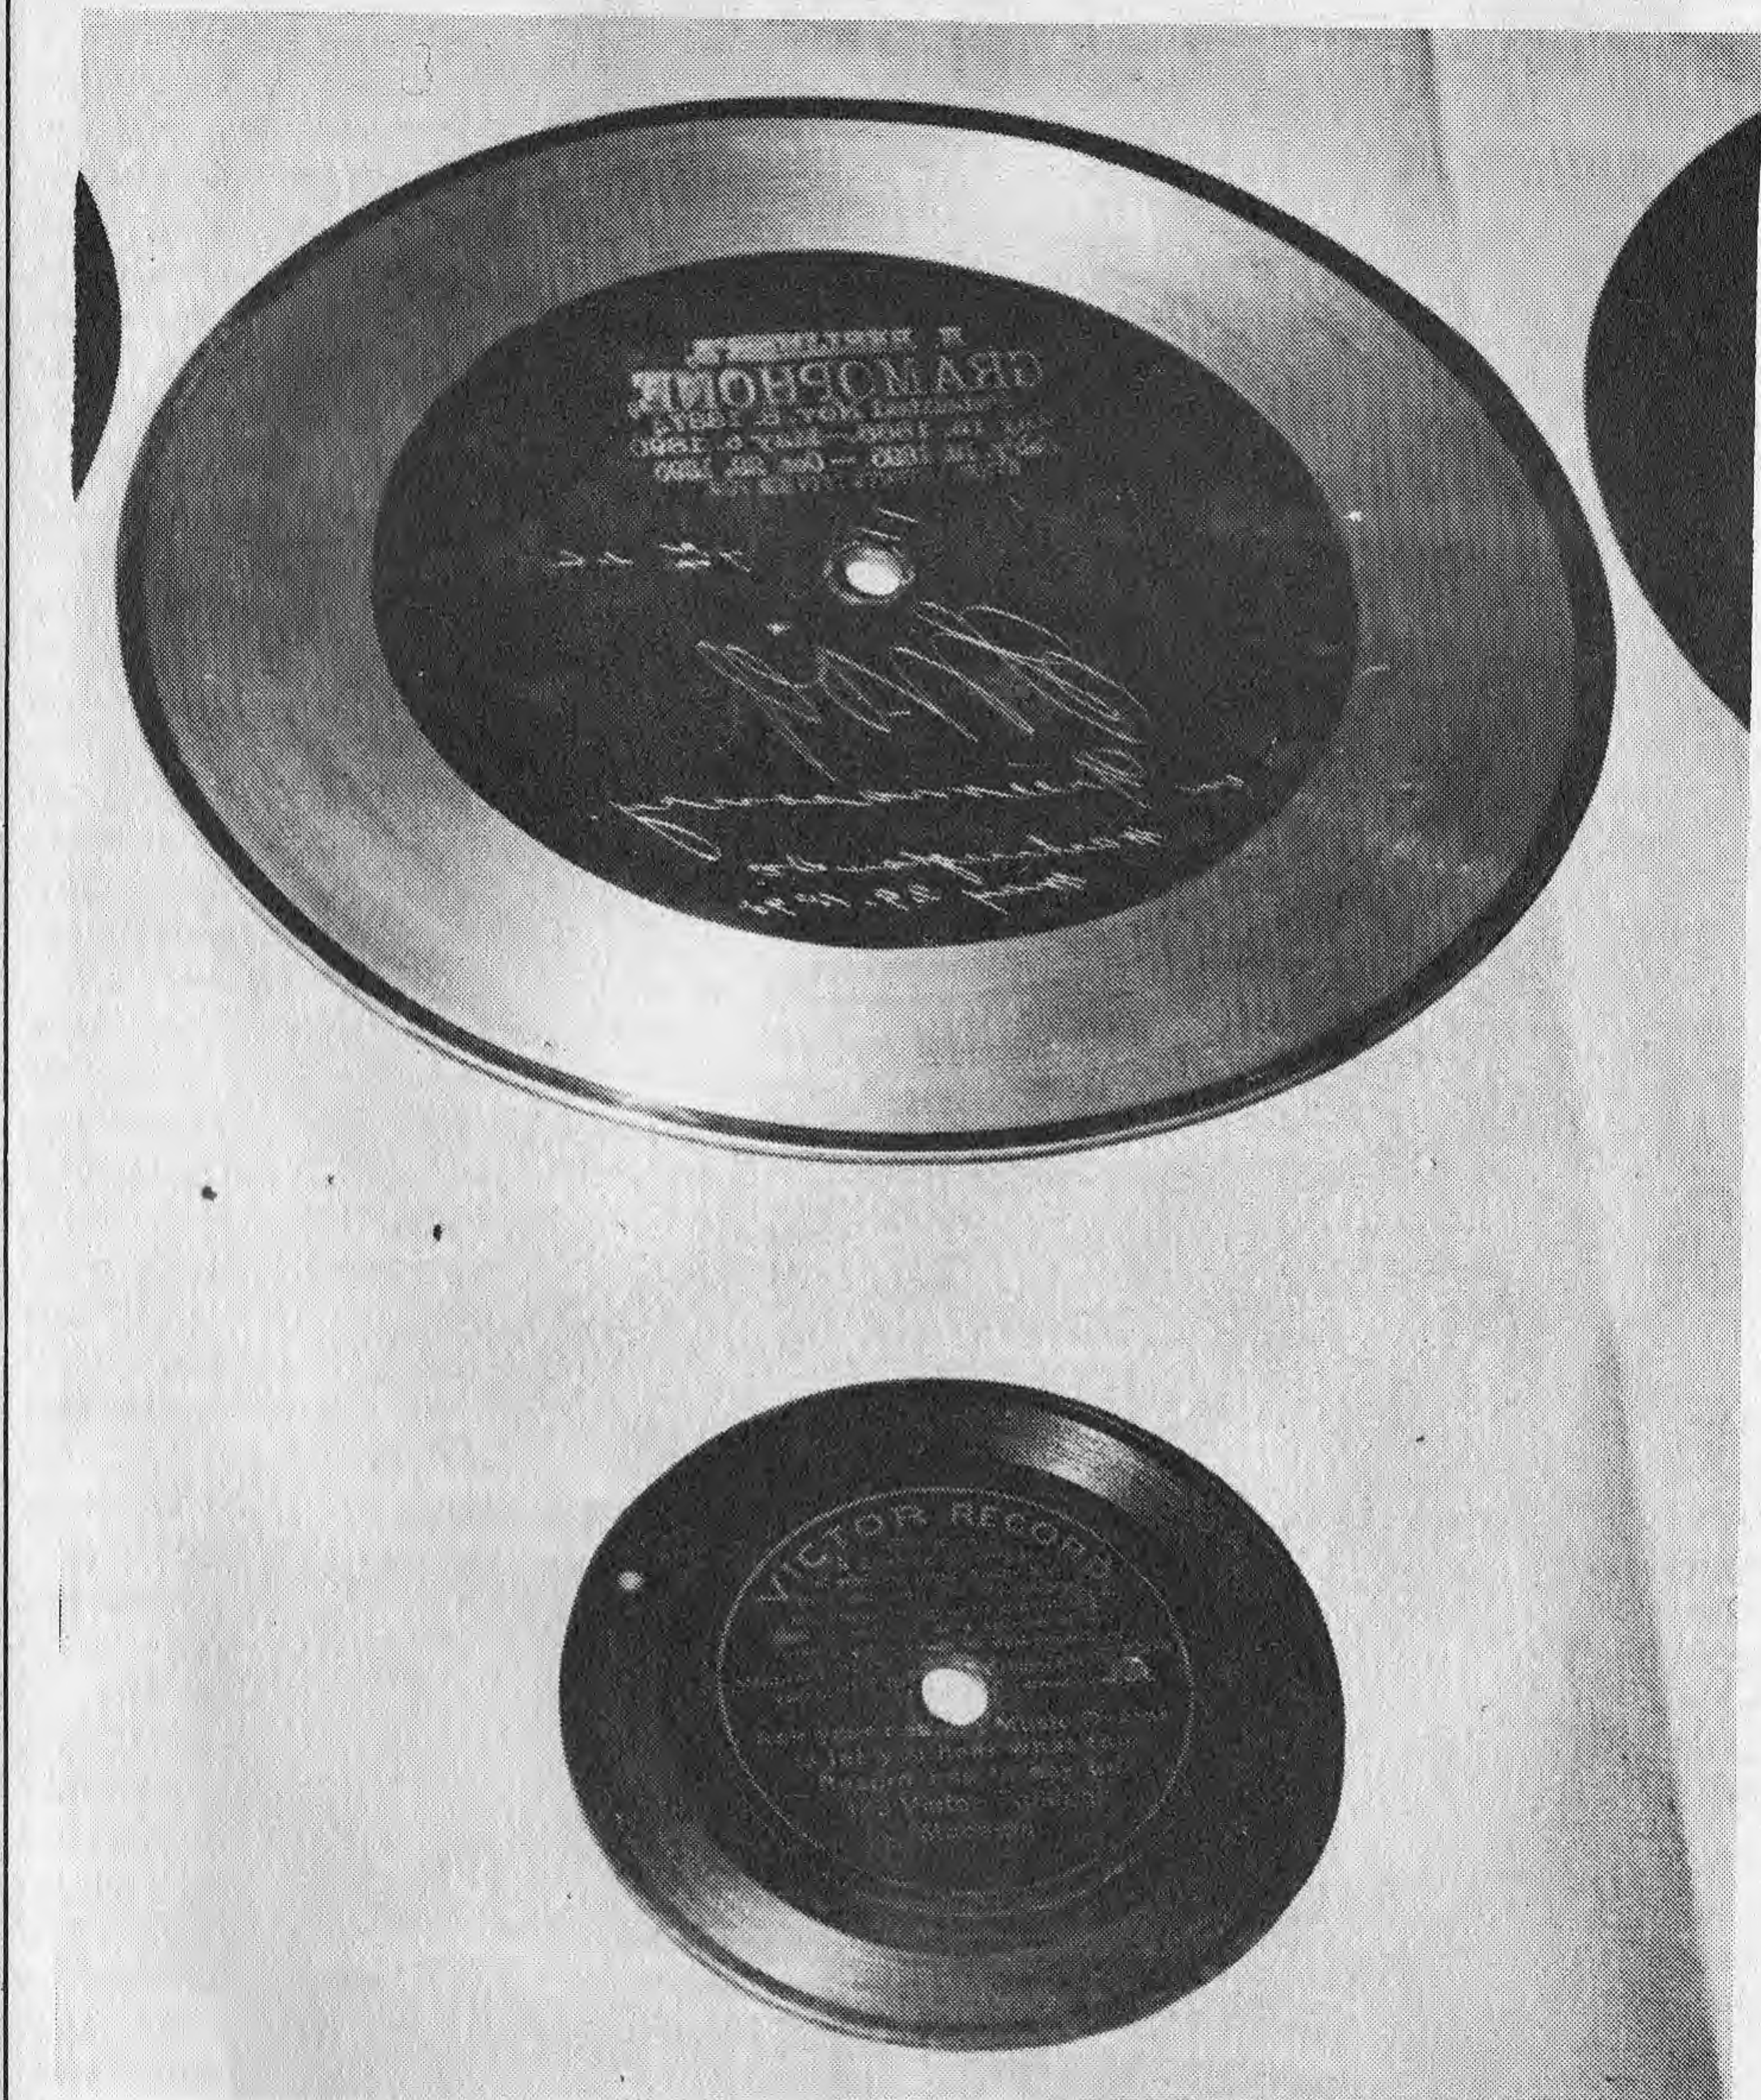

The only known example of the Columbia Toy Graphophone, ca. 1899, with vertical-cut disc.

The Stollwerck Gramophone, ca. 1905, played a chocolate record which could then BE eaten.

The cast-iron "Little Wonder", made during the 'teens by the Boston Talking Machine Co.

At the top, a Berliner stamper, May 29, 1898. At the bottom, a Johnson advertising record.

The extremely rare model of the Victor Lumiere, utilizing a large pleated diaphragm-horn.

BOOK REVIEW

Collectors should be aware of several interesting items this month, available from a variety of publishers. The Vestal Press, which is deservedly well-known for its publications in the musical field, has added two new items of interest. The first is an extremely attractive repair and maintenance manual for the famous WurliTzer Model 1015 Juke Box (the "Bubbler" appears on the cover of Music Machines — American Style). Measuring about 8½" by 11", and originally published in 1946, it is printed on heavy stock and contains over 100 pages. Included are hundreds of close-up illustrations of the cabinetry, amplifier system, coin mechanism, record changer, schematics, etc. Every single part is numbered (if only these could still be ordered from North Tonawanda!). Accompanying the many illustrations is a detailed text, so that anyone with some mechanical ability can become his own serviceman, and not forget to "turn over the needle after 400 plays." Highly recommended for all owners of this Juke Box, as well as others who don't have room for the machine, but want to dream and learn more about the golden age of these mechanical wonders. Available from Vestal Press, Box 97, Vestal 48 N.Y. 13850, for a reasonable $9.95 ppd.

The second item is a handsome 1911 Victor Talking Machine Catalog, measuring about 5" by 7", and containing 32 pages. The numerous illustrations are sharply printed and enlivened with a touch of red ink. Outside horn Victors in production at the time, from the Junior to the VI, are shown in a style similar to APM's #13. But the Victrolas have become more ornate and include table-top Victrolas X and XI, with gold plating, and the beautiful XVI Vernis-Martin. The sizes of the horn cabinets continue to increase, although the VI cabinet here is 7 25/32" high and just two years later would measure 8 5/32" high. Bargain priced at $2.50 ppd., also from Vestal Press.

A Columbia reprint, this time dated November 1, 1898, has been issued by J. P. Agnard, 8635 Avenue Prevert, Charlesbourg, Quebec, Canada G1G 5B3. Measuring 4" by 5", with attractive red covers, it shows 40 pages of cylinder graphophones, horns, coin-ops, cabinets, accessories, etc. The cover makes the interesting admission that Columbia is a licensee of Thomas A. Edison! The growth between this catalog and APM's #18 is quite obvious. The pictures, however, could have been sharper, and the $5.00 price tag is a little steep for a catalog this size. But avid Columbia collectors will want to accumulate a year-by-year history of the Company, and order directly from Mr. Agnard at the above address.

Our interest was recently caught by something electrical, and even though we have admitted to a bias against anything that doesn't have a crank, we were fascinated by two books published by an outfit called Vintage Radio. Vintage Radio, 1887-1929 (263 pages) and A Flick of the Switch, 1930-1950 (312 pages), both written and edited by Morgan McMahon, were so well designed that I was quickly absorbed. The first book, with over 1000 pictures, gives a
